A Short History of the Edinburgh University Club of London.

By

SIR DYCE DUCKWORTH, Bart., M.D., F.R.C.P., LL.D.

(Sole Surviving Original Member of the Club).

THE Founders of the Edinburgh University Club were undoubtedly Dr. Markham, who graduated in 1840, and Dr. Edward Sieveking, who graduated in 1841.

On the 27th of June, 1864, a meeting was held in Dr. Sieveking's house in Manchester Square, presided over by the Principal of the University, Sir David Brewster. Twenty-one Graduates attended, and letters were read from others, including Professor Christison and Professor Syme. It was resolved that an Association of the Graduates of the University should be formed in London.

The first Dinner was held on August 1st, 1864, at the Freemason's Tavern, when 64 members attended; Dr. Markham was in the Chair. Dr. Charles Murchison read to the company the Regulations agreed upon for the Club which were duly approved. The names of Dr. Harley, Dr. Perigal, and Dr. Halley should be noted for their help in these early days.

Sir David Brewster was elected the first President, and Professor Christison, Professor Syme, Dr. Roget, F.R.S., and Dr. Copland, F.R.S., were the first Vice-Presidents.

A Council of twelve was formed; Dr. Sieveking was appointed Treasurer, and Dr. Murchison, Secretary. Three Trustees of Investments were nominated. Later on, a Chaplain was elected to grace our meetings. It may be noted that our founders were mostly men in high professional positions, many of them being Hospital Physicians and Clinical Teachers.

Members were soon elected from the counties, and the numbers increased yearly. There were then, as now, more members of the medical profession than of any other Faculty, but it has always been the largest in the University. Later on, it was decided to admit to the Club as members, certain men who had taken part of their University education in Edinburgh, but had graduated elsewhere in Scotland or England. St. Andrew's graduates were the first to establish a Dining Club. We followed shortly after, and Glasgow and Aberdeen Universities later on instituted their Clubs with similar interests in London.

It appears that I am now the senior member of this Club, dating from 1864. The first dinner I attended was on August 1st, 1865. Our rule then was always to dine on that date, because it was the regular day on which graduations in medicine were held. Since then, the Club has met three or four times yearly in the West end of London. Guests of members have been gladly received on these occasions.

We have never seen our way to build, or take, a house for the Club, and our experience of more than half a century does not suggest any scheme for enlarging our responsibilities beyond the present ones, in any direction.

We gladly welcome graduates in any of the Faculties, and are by no means a professional Medical Club. Our interests are as wide as possible. We have no politics, nor is any political clap-trap permitted at our meetings. Many of our members do not join in their early years, and are often grey-headed before we welcome them. They are mostly busy men. Our members now amount to 646, including 12 honorary, and 32 "starred" members who have studied at the University but did not graduate. Ordinary members now number 602. The total number that have joined the Club since its formation amounts to 1,485. Deaths and resignations account, so far, for 839.

From time to time the Club has taken part in various matters affecting the interests of the University. We encouraged the enlargement of its new buildings by promoting large meetings in London, and the desirability of securing Parliamentary representation. We instituted the Syme Fellowship and the Murchison Scholarship. As a body, we may fairly be regarded as ever ready to encourage any schemes for improvement that may be suggested by the Senatus of the University. Looking back on the last fifty-nine years we may certainly declare that the Club has fully justified itself, and proved a strong link between the University and ourselves.

Our debt is great to many of our members who have undertaken the duties of Secretary for the Club. Their work includes numerous communications with members, and duties on the Council. They are generally busy in their profession, but never grudge time or efforts for their duties.

I can well recall the voices and peculiarities of many of our distinguished Chairmen, and of our best speakers and singers. The solemn bass voice of Christison, the soothing tones of Lister, the precision of Turner, the sentences of Blackie, and others of our Professors. We can never forget the clever merriment of George Ogilvie's mélange of Scottish and exact French in his amusing speeches, nor the intense delivery of Dr. Glover's touching Highland songs, and Dr. Don's inspiring "Auld Lang Syne." Sir Crichton-Browne's eloquence has often stirred and refreshed us.

Many of us can recall more recent speeches from Lord Balfour, Lord Kingsbury, Lord Balfour of Burleigh, Lord Finlay, and Lord Shaw of Dunfermline. Our Parliamentary representatives have taken their parts, especially our present senior one, Sir Henry Craik, whose powerful interest in the welfare of the University is known to all our members. Nor have we forgotten the speech of a late Lord Rector, Admiral of the Fleet Lord Beatty, two years ago.

The various Professions are well placed amongst us. If the Medical members are more numerous than others we belong to a widely-spread and generally wide-minded profession which holds a prominent position, daily increasing, in helping on the welfare and health of our country and empire. We can look back with satisfaction to the few original members of the Club who were wisely stirred to found it in 1864. We may be pleased to remember that we have kept closely to the aims of the Founders. It was simply designed as a Dining Club, and we venture to hope that it will long continue on these lines which have hitherto so fully and successfully worked out.

23rd November, 1923.
